

3-case

Dismissal of a non-specialist often does not cause any difficulties for management. What if the employee, as a specialist, meets all the requirements, job description, but as a person does not fit into the team, does not know how to build communications, is constantly in confrontation with part of the team, keeping employees in suspense, while performing his professional duties perfectly. What should a director be guided by?