

11-CASE

Language Activities

A. Many authors enjoy using alliteration – a literary device where the author repeats the same sound at the beginning of several words. Here's one such example: “. . . grouching, grouching, grumbling about something or other."

Using your imagination, create your own examples of alliteration from the following topics. Each example must contain a minimum of three words.

The howl of a wolf.
The sound of a symphony
The wind blowing the leaves	