

15-case

After the holidays, five second-graders tell each other about how they spent the summer, what “feats” they accomplished. In their stories, the boys try to impress each other with their dexterity, ingenuity, risk-taking and courage. What are the psychological reasons for this behavior?